AMELIE RIEVES.

A Charming Pen-Picture of a Charming Woman.

A Clarksville Young Lady Tells of a Delightful Interview With This Distinguished Woman.

To the Tobacco Leaf-Chronicle.

ELKTON, VA., Dec. 27.—I have it in my mind to write you a letter, but

"How the subject there may gang, Let time and chance determine, It may perhaps turn out a sang, Perhaps turn out a sermon."

Since leaving Clarksville in mid-summer, I have been over a goodly portion of the Old Dominion, taking in Washington, Mount Vernon and many other beautiful places, but I think an account of my visit to Amelia Rieves will be of much interest to your readers, especially as the eyes of the literary world have once been turned upon her, by the recent publication of "Barbara Dering." The late magazines and papers are discussing this book, so criticism from me is out of order. Besides I have not read it. I did read the story to which it is a sequel, "The Quick or the Dead," and it impressed me as "a bit of literature to be handled only with the tongue," but as I sat in the elegant drawing-room of Castle Hill, and looked at its distinguished authors, the old French proverb Honni soit qui mal y pense came into my mind. Contrary to many criticisms, I found her a most refined, lady-like and charming woman, and saw nothing about her suggestive of "standing on her head on top of a haystack," and the many masculine qualities with which the press has endowed her. She spoke, herself, of the various pen portraits that had been drawn of her, saying how untrue to nature they were; that they were so many pet spoofs, with which she amused herself and that she considered herself something of a philanthropist from the fact that many a poor, half-starved reporter had made a comfortable fee by writing mean things of her. This was not said in sarcasm either; those who know her will say she is the soul of charity. Her face certainly indicates this grace, as well as many other strong and admirable traits of heart and mind. None of her pictures do justice. While they show her exquisitely moulded features, they lack the expression of soul: intelligence and kindness that beam on you in her presence; but even these charms are eclipsed by an indescribable something—that which novelists call "the spirit." She is decidedly classical in appearance, and is a genius of high order. She was writing Barbara Dering at the time of my visit, but said she gave only her leisure moments to it, devoting most of her time to art. She brought her master, La Sa, from Paris, and to use her own words, "is working like a little dog." Another expression was: "I am studying art like a man." She meant by this that she was not satisfied with the superficial dabbling that is the right of ambition to the average woman. But there is nothing mediocre about Amelia Rieves. I asked to see some of her pictures. She answered: "I don't make pictures." I am trying to master the fundamental principles of art. However, she showed me some of her studies. One was of her private secretary. Now, girls, you hopeful young artists of Clarksville, what do you think of it? Amelia Rieves, after studying art all her life, both in America and abroad, does not think herself competent to make a picture. By the way, she told me that our own dear Miss Eva Smith was the only American teacher she ever had. She spoke in very complimentary terms of Miss Smith's ability and thoroughness, both in music and art.

One of Mrs. Chandler's greatest charms is her perfect simplicity. As I sat in the drawing room awaiting her entrance I expected to see a great, stately woman sweep in, awing me with her magnificence and imposing manners. I was agreeably surprised when a petite little blonde appeared in a simple walking suit, receiving me in the unaffected, cordial way that bespeaks really good breeding. During our conversation she remarked that she never saw any callers, that she had gripped seventeen times and that it made a hole in one of her lungs. A recent paper stated that she was threatened with rheumatism and had gone to Warm Springs for relief, which I sincerely trust she may get. The rumor of an estrangement between her and Mr. Chandler is no doubt false, as she mentioned him in a very affectionate way, saying his pet name for her was "Amy." We received further hospitality at the hands of Mrs. Rieves, who ordered quite a comfortable lunch for us, and expressed regrets at not being able to invite us to remain to dinner, saying the chief butler was out.

One thing more I must mention, and that is Amelia Rieves' delightful faculty of coining words in conversation as well as in her writings. They roll from her tongue, seemingly without effort, and are generally composed of roots, which express her ideas in a crisp and original style. H. L. Y.

Reputation.

The reputation of a man is made up of what people say of him. In like manner the reputation of a medicine depends on what they who have used it say. No remedy in existence has so good a reputation as a blood remedy as B. B. B. (Botanic Blood Balm). It is a successful physician's prescription, and quickly cures both mild and terrible cases of bad blood.

Dr. L. A. Guild, Atlanta, Ga., writes: "Wm. Sealock, living on my place, had an ugly running ulcer on his arm which ordinary remedies failed to control. As a last resort I placed him on a use of B. B. B., and the ulcer began to heal at once, and effected an entire cure. It is a remedy well worthy of confidence."

Dr. J. E. Hall, druggist at Americus, Ga., writes: "A planter near this place had several of his best laborers effected with syphilis. He got them B. B. B., and pronounced them all well. A gang of A. P. & L. railroad hands use B. B. B. with great benefit to counteract the effects of swamp malaria."

THE CHARGE DENIED.

Reported That Mr. Cleveland is For Porter or McMillin.

The Friends of the Aspiring Candidates. However, Say the Report is Without Foundation.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—The charge made in the New York Sun that President-elect Cleveland is attempting to control the senatorial election in Tennessee in behalf of Porter or McMillin is creating much interest here. It stirs up considerable feeling among the friends of Bate and Taylor, who say they doubt the accuracy of the statement. It is well known, however, that Mr. Cleveland was very fond of ex-Gov. Porter, when the latter was Assistant Secretary of State, and doubtless would be very glad to see him in the Senate in a time when he will need friends there, as seems likely to be the case during the next two years.

Ex-Gov. Taylor's friends here claim to have a report from Tennessee which justifies them claiming his election as highly probable.

Should ex-Gov. Porter not become Senator it is quite probable that he may be invited to take his old position as Assistant Secretary of State, or perhaps be given an important mission abroad, for which his experience and ability would especially fit him.

THE SENATORIAL RACE.

Much Interest Being Taken in it in Political Circles Here.

The all-absorbing topic about the court-house now in the political field is the contest for United States Senator. Clarksville can get stirred up on politics quicker than any city on earth and it can cool down just as quick. Three days ago this contest was hardly mentioned. Now, however, everybody has something to say about it. The city is divided on the question more than many people had expected. The division, however, is between Taylor and Bate, Col. Savage not being in it. There are many who say Bate has a walk-over, while others say Taylor will get there. Another faction is in favor of a deadlock and of having the seat filled by a dark horse.

BOB HARPER THE RIGHT MAN.

Miss Anderson States Positively That He was Her Assailant.

Miss Kate Anderson, who was assaulted, and for which the Bowling Green mob hung Bob Harper, made public the following statement yesterday:

"I have no doubt whatever, and the conviction has grown upon my mind since the first time he was brought into my presence that Bob Harper was the negro who assaulted me Dec. 14. Only the fear that he would be instantly hung before my eyes kept me from saying so positively all the time, and I could not rid myself of this fear, and I was so nervous and frightened when I was before the court at times I could not command my voice to talk. If any blame attaches to me for this let the people blame me. I always knew and said that it was a face I had seen before, but it was so horribly distorted that day I could not identify him. I had not seen Bob Harper but three or four times in the last two years, and had been accustomed to seeing him with his mill clothes on, and his face, eyebrows and hair covered with mill dust. It was a horrible death for any human being, but I would never have been without fear as long as he was alive. I make this statement in justice to myself and everybody concerned in this unfortunate affair, uninfluenced by the members of my family or anybody else."

"Beauty is but a vain and doubtful good," but "C. C. C. Certain Cough Cure" is always good for coughs, colds, lagrippe, croup, etc. Sold by Owen & Moore.

WILLIAM HENRY SMITH BARRED.

Further Specifications of the Literary King's Deeds.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—The Post reiterates its recent assertion that certain valuable manuscripts that had been placed in the archives of the state department for the benefit of the public had been utilized only for the use of certain parties in Boston. The Post asserts that the western writer it recently alluded to who was not allowed access to these documents was Mr. William Henry Smith who, though "a man of influence, of reputation and of learning," nevertheless found that not one of these qualities was an open sesame to the carefully guarded records."

The article, which is long, further asserts that while the historical papers have been so jealously guarded from the seeker after information who was not within the ring, it is a fact that those who had the pull were allowed not only to place all available copyists at work, but to bring cameras and photograph page after page of the valuable records, penmanship not being swift enough. During the past few years everything that is of any value in the department has been carried away—not bodily, to be sure, but in facsimile—for the financial benefit of a certain firm which has been enjoying a monopoly of these records.

RAILROAD DEAL.

The Baltimore and Ohio Secures Control of the Ohio and Mississippi.

BAITIMORE, Dec. 31.—The contest made by the old directors of the Ohio and Mississippi Railway company, against the control of that company passing into the hands of the Baltimore and Ohio, has been brought to a close by the voluntary resignation of four of five remaining members of the old board. These vacancies will be filled by friends of the Baltimore and Ohio. Prior to the retirement of this last batch of directors the Baltimore and Ohio had practical possession of the Ohio and Mississippi, eight of the thirteen directors in the company being friendly to the Baltimore and Ohio, and were elected members of the board through Baltimore and Ohio influences. The voluntary resignation of these directors avoids the necessity of further litigation to compel them to relinquish their positions.

ERNEST MAYNARD

Killed By Falling From the Rigging of His Ship.

The Tragic End of a Clarksville Boy On the High Seas—Buried at Key West.

Mr. J. M. House, of Dallas, Texas, encloses the LEAF-CHRONICLE the following notice of the death of Capt. Ernest Maynard, which he clipped from a recent issue of the Dallas News:

Capt. Maynard, the young man whose mother is the matron of the Woman's Home in Dallas, is dead. The News some time ago published a full account of his rapid advance in position as a seafaring boy and how highly he was estimated. In early manhood he is cut off. He fell from the rigging to the deck and was so badly injured he died on shipboard and was buried at Key West as soon as his ship got in port.

Ernest Maynard was born in the old Southern Hotel in this city about twenty-two years ago and was consequently in his twenty-third year. His father was route agent for the Southern Express Company and had his headquarters here for several years, boarding at the Southern Hotel. Some time ago the LEAF-CHRONICLE published a thrilling account of young Maynard's experiences on the sea and in foreign lands, and for his fight for promotion. The account read like a romance and will be remembered by the readers of the LEAF-CHRONICLE. Young Maynard was second officer on the steamer "Alamo" when killed. In speaking of the death, Mr. House adds: "His parents had a great many friends in Clarksville, and I know his poor mother, who is now living in Dallas, and seems almost heartbroken, would appreciate a notice of his death in the LEAF-CHRONICLE."

There are many people in Clarksville who have a pleasurable recollection of Mrs. Maynard and her little son, and she will have their sympathy in her bereavement.

SERIOUS SITUATION.

Judge Turney's Condition Said To Be Alarming.

Suffering From a Complication of Diseases Either One of Which is Regarded as Dangerous.

The Memphis Appeal-Avalanche says editorially: "The Appeal-Avalanche has information that the condition of Gov.-elect Turney is far more serious than the people of the State generally believe. The announcement made yesterday in the Appeal-Avalanche's dispatches that the oath of office would be administered to him at his home is indicative, to a certain degree, of real truth, which is discouraging in the utmost degree. There are many persons having close knowledge of the distinguished invalid who do not believe that he will ever reach Nashville. He is suffering a complication of diseases, any one of which would be regarded as dangerous."

FINE BRONZE TURKEYS.

Something About an Industry Now Going on at Glenellen.

The people of Montgomery county who want fine bronze turkeys, standard bred, for breeding purposes, should not send away from home to get them when they can be had cheap right at their doors. Jno. B. Ferguson, of Glenellen, is running an advertisement in the Semi-Weekly LEAF-CHRONICLE in which he tells the people that he has a very fine lot of standard bred bronze turkeys which he will sell at prices reasonably low. He has recently added to his drove a fine young gobbler purchased from Geo. Wolfe, of Seneca Falls, a famed breeder of standard bronze turkeys. This turkey cost Mr. Ferguson ten dollars and the express charges from Seneca Falls, amounting in all, to sixteen dollars. He also has a yearling gobbler of his own raising which tilts the scales at forty pounds. This drove of turkeys is perhaps the finest one in Tennessee, and there is no good sense in people sending off to buy bronze turkeys when they can be had at home as well bred and at cheaper rates than they can be had elsewhere. Address Jno. B. Ferguson, Glenellen, Tenn.

Do you wish to know the quickest way to cure a cold? We will tell you. To cure a cold quickly, it must be treated before the cold has become settled in the system. The first symptoms are a dry, loud cough and sneezing. The cough is soon followed by watery expectoration, and the sneezing by a profuse watery discharge from the nose. In severe cases there is a thin white coating on the tongue. What to do: It is only necessary to take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in double doses every hour. That will greatly lessen the severity of the cold and in many cases will effectually counteract it, and cure what would have been a severe cold within one or two days' time. Try it and be convinced. 50 cent bottles for sale by Owen & Moore, druggists.

THE FIRE RECORD.

The Old Usery Homestead Destroyed in the Seventeenth District.

The news reached the city last evening of the burning of Dr. B. W. Usery's house Thursday evening, in the Seventeenth district. Dr. Usery resided at the old homestead and had many family relics in the house besides the furniture and many valuable notes and papers. These were all destroyed, together with about $40 in money.

There was no one at home when the fire originated, hence the particulars are meagre. Dr. Usery's loss, however, will be considerable.

Royal Baking Powder Purest and Strongest.

Reports the Royal Baking Powder the greatest in leavening strength,

Yielding over 27 per cent. more gas than the average of the others tested. Dr. Collier adds: "I have made many analyses of various brands of baking powders and

"I have always found the Royal composed of pure and wholesome ingredients."
